Before we wrap up the insurance needs, we would again like to emphasize two points. Numerous people have fallen for these psychological traps and have had their finances ruined. We will not get ahead of ourselves and consider ourselves to be above all risks and accidents. In all probability, 99 out of 100 people are not the unlucky ones. But what if, we are that one person? It is better to be safe than sorry. The financial circumstances are so significant that it is way better to consistently be insured.

Secondly, being covered for risks is psychologically so peaceful. It gives so much mental strength that god-forbid if something happens, our assets and families will be taken care of. Many people start with insurance, they pay the premiums year in and year out, but the risk does not materialize for years and slowly they start thinking of insurance as money down the drain. But one day, out of the blue something might happen and destroy the financial well-being of our family. A single event can take us 5-7 years back.

With this, we are almost done with our lazy profile canvas. We have filled almost all the blocks and understood the guiding profile of our Financial Plan. We see that the profile is very personal and therefore the plan that we will create will be specifically tailored for us. However, we often see that people behave differently even after knowing the right choices that are to be made. The reason for this is reality influences. Let us understand these in detail.
