

PRODUCT

A company could have competitive advantages because of its value propositions, product decisions, and the customer segment served. Following are some examples of companies having a competitive advantage through their products:

COMPANY OR PRODUCT	TYPE OF PRODUCT ADVANTAGE	DESCRIPTION
AMAZON	Value proposition	The platform is recognised as a favourable marketplace for new goods.
EBAY	Value proposition	The platform is recognised as a favourable marketplace for old and used goods.
FLIPKART	Product decisions	Cash on delivery service made it easy for customers to trust Flipkart over other platforms.
ARMY CANTEEN	Customer segment	Sell exclusively to army families and thus, enjoy a lot of loyalty from army families.

VALUE PROPOSITIONS

When we were looking at industries, we analysed the value propositions of the industry in general. But now, we will go a step further and find the differences in value propositions of different companies in the industry. We want to look at each company and ask if there is some value provided by their product that other companies do not or cannot provide.

VALUE FOR OLD & USED GOODS

ebay > amazon

VALUE FOR NEW GOODS

amazon > ebay