

PEOPLE

A company could have competitive advantages because of the people involved. These 'people' could be internal or external individuals, companies or institutions from inside the company and outside the company. Let us understand the 'people' story of competitive advantages by dividing them into internal and external people.

INTERNAL

First, let us look at the internal people that can give a company an advantage. The word 'people' is used very loosely here to include entities like subsidiaries and parent companies.
