

For our purposes, we will not differentiate between primary and support activities and see them all as just activities. By comparing parts of value chains of different companies in the same industry, we can see who does which activity better and recognise their competitive advantages.

For instance, Apple wins over the market through its technology and marketing. Netflix, on the other hand, is very good at content procurement and production. These sections of their value chains form their competitive advantages.

This is where the understanding of the industry will come in very handy. It will help us identify parts of the value chain that are more important than others.

Let us compare the value chains of TCI Express and Delhivery and observe where they would have comparative advantages.