

SIGNS OF COMPETITIVE EDGE

Following are some key signs that a company might have an edge over its competitors:

When a company has the largest market share in an industry, there must be some reason for its dominance. It might be that their products are seen as more valuable than others or they carry better brand value. Maybe the market leader can afford to sell at a lower price than its competitors. One of the sources that might lead to market leadership would be having a strong distribution network.