

As the confidence band increases, the probability of the index coming in that range increases. Also, the premiums decrease when the strategy goes from aggressive to conservative.

This approach combines statistical probability with a practical trading strategy. It ensures that traders can make informed decisions that match their risk profiles. Later in the book, we will share resources for generating naked option strategies based on confidence band analysis.

Notes

