

The People of North America

to Mexico—is home to a greater and more diverse variety of intermingled peoples, cultures, and religions than anywhere else on Earth.

CITY LIFE

The great cities of North America all provide important public spaces that define both their physical and their human landscapes. During the winter months, and especially at Christmas, New Yorkers flock to the huge skating rink at Rockefeller Center.

FAITHS AND FESTIVALS

In North America, the most extravagant celebrations tend to be religious. Here, Mexican Catholics mark the festival of Our Lady of Guadalupe (December 12) outside the grand 18th-century Basilica de Guadalupe in Mexico city.
