

East coast

the cosmopolitan buzz of New York City, the historic centers of Boston and Philadelphia, and the picturesque landscapes of New England, with its fiery fall foliage, popular winter resorts, and traditional industries such as farming and fishing.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK

Times Square, where it meets the lights of Broadway, forms the heart of New York City, an international center of business and culture, and one of the world's most exciting cities. Broadway was originally an American Indian woodland path.

NATURAL HERITAGE

Most of the pretty, old buildings in New England (like this rural Vermont church) are made of wood. There are two main reasons for this: the early British settlers were familiar with timber-frame construction, and the forested landscape provided plenty of free building material.

MAPLE SYRUP

For hundreds of years, New Englanders have been using the sweet sap from the local trees to make maple syrup. There is only one short season a year when sap can be collected, and the earlier in this season the sap is drawn, the higher its sugar content, and therefore its quality.

WINTER WONDERLAND

The hilly terrain and crisp, snowy weather in Vermont make it an ideal ski resort. The world's first rope-tow ski lift was invented here, and early versions were powered by Model-T Ford engines. Ski lifts revolutionized the sport since they multiplied dramatically the number of runs enthusiasts could make in one day.
