

are difficult to understand, so to make it easier, on the next four pages we are reducing the whole world down to a village of 100 people so that the statistics are easier to absorb. The 100 villagers live in many different ways. They are different nationalities, they speak different languages, and practice different religions, but deep down they all strive for the same things: enough food and water, and a happy, healthy life.

RELIGION

Most people in the world belong to a religion.

In the village there are:

32 Christians

19 Muslims

13 Hindus

12 Shamanists, animists, and other folk religions

6 Buddhists

2 belong to global religions such as Confucianism

1 Jew

15 non-religious

LANGUAGE

It is estimated that there are 3,000 languages spoken in the world. In the village:

22 speak a Chinese dialect

9 speak English

8 speak Hindi

7 speak Spanish

4 speak Arabic

4 speak Bengali

3 speak Portuguese

3 speak Russian

40 speak other languages

AIR AND WATER

In most of the village the air and water is healthy and clean, but in some areas it is polluted, which is unhealthy for the villagers.

Water is also in short supply for some people.

WATER

75 people have access to safe water in their homes or within a short distance.

25 people must spend a large part of each day collecting safe water.

SANITATION

60 people have access to public and household sewage control.

AIR

68 people breathe in clean air.

32 people breathe in polluted air.

Only half of the children in the village are immunized against infectious diseases.