

"Pelt" inlaid with tiny diamonds

Platinum setting

Panther brooch | From the "Panthère de Cartier" series, this white gold panther brooch is set with hundreds of small diamonds, an onyx nose, and enamel spots.

Trinity ring | This platinum trinity ring is set with a large solitaire-mounted central diamond and numerous small diamonds bleeding off onto the band.

18-karat white gold setting

"Buckle" ring | The central bezel of this ring has been designed to resemble a buckle. The band and bezel are both set with round and baguette-cut diamonds.

Diamond centrepiece

"Ribbon" brooch | Devised as a pair of ribbons passing through a circular buckle, this brooch is set with one large diamond and numerous smaller ones.

Briolette diamond

Briolette diamond brooch | Created for Van Cleef & Arpels, this phoenix brooch is set with diamonds and sapphires, with a 96.62-carat diamond in its beak.

Champagne diamond

Spider stick pin | Made around 1900, this Art Nouveau stick pin is crafted in the form of a spider, and is set with a 0.80-carat champagne diamond.

Platinum setting

Cullinan III and IV brooch | The diamonds in this platinum brooch are two of the smaller stones cut from the world's largest diamond, the 3,106-carat Cullinan (see pp.53 and 54).

The Orange

A natural rarity

Orange-coloured fancy diamonds are noted of their rarity, and mostly occur only in smaller sizes. As a result, this gemstone caused a stir when it was put up for sale. At the time of its auction in 2013, The Orange was claimed to be the largest fancy vivid orange diamond in the world – estimated to be 14.82 carats. Its size, beauty, and rarity were reflected in its price, and it was sold by Christie's auctioneers in Geneva for over $35 million.

Bright, natural colour The Orange is unusual for its combination of fine colour and large size.
