

Caudipteryx

kor-DIP-ter-iks

With its feathered body and tail, this little dinosaur might have looked a bit like a prehistoric peacock.

Adaptable eater
Caudipteryx was a theropod. Most theropods only ate meat but Caudipteryx ate plants and animals. Its toothy beak could shred plants, gobble insects, and crack open seeds.

We had feathers but couldn't fly. Our feathers kept us warm and helped us look good to other Caudipteryx.
