

The next question is whether the company has the liquidity and resources to pay the accrued expenses on time. This becomes more important when accrued expenses are high. We see here that the accrued expenses are negligible. Thus, these questions are not that relevant for Pidilite Industries Ltd.

Let us quickly summarize the working capital we understood.

Working Capital is of two types: Operating Working capital and Financing working capital

Then, we took a look at the changes in both of them. We also saw how big is the working capital compared to EBIT and PAT.

Then we saw how much Operating working capital is required by the company and compared it with Fixed Assets and Total Assets.
