

Going back to the Income Statement, we find Segments assets in the Notes to accounts. This way, we can understand the segment assets and their expansion.

Suppose the company does not report the expansion being made. In that case, we can always read the management commentary or read the conference call where the company explains where they are expanding their capacity.

It is important to know which segments the company is betting on for the future and then analyze our take on that particular segment. Do we align with the company's vision or differ in our opinion?

What is the purpose of expansion? Or what is the motivation behind expansion?

This is a subjective question, and we might not find the answer to this question at all times. The idea is to understand which segments the company is growing in and the purpose or reason behind the expansion in those particular segments. What will be achieved once the expansion plans are completed?

What is the purpose of expansion? Or what is the motivation behind expansion?
