

In the previous chapters, we concluded our discussion on Income Statements, Balance Sheets, and Cash Flow. The last thing to focus on are the items in Notes to Accounts that do not appear in any of the above statements.

These items are quite critical in nature and can make or break a company. Examples of such items are- ESOPs, Contingent Liabilities, Related Party Transactions etc.

We need to ask questions to understand and analyze them properly as they are quite significant. So, let us start with ESOPs.
