

There are some cases where the larger chunk of the business is owned by a subsidiary. The details can be found as part of the notes of the consolidated statement.

As an example, if a company has a total turnover of 1000 cr with only one subsidiary accounting the 900 cr. In this case, the standalone statement will only be worth 100cr as revenue. We must be careful in such cases where the major value of the company resides in one of its subsidiaries. We must identify the subsidiaries that hold majority of the value and dig deeper into them.

Composition of

Consolidation

A company's consolidated statement will give us a list of its subsidiaries and their details, including shares, profits, and assets.

The list will have details for the following under notes to accounts:

- ➡ Fully owned (100%) subsidiaries
- ➡ Partially owned subsidiaries, which are not 100% owned by the company
- ➡ Joint ventures

This will help us understand things like Revenue, Profit After Tax, Net assets, liabilities, ownership percentage and so on for each subsidiary.
