

Numbers for Major Subsidiaries

A detailed break-down also helps us focus only on the major subsidiaries rather than all of them. For a company like Reliance industries which has hundreds of subsidiaries. We can figure out the 4-5 significant subsidiaries based on the detailed numbers, including sales, profits, return on assets, and return on equity. We can then focus most of our time and energy on understanding the selected subsidiaries rather than all of them.

SUMMING UP

Again, to sum up, the standalone statement only refers to a company's parent business and is not its accurate reflection. While, consolidated numbers will include not only the parent company but all its subsidiaries, joint ventures, etc.

It will also help us understand the different subsidiaries owned by the parent company and which are the most valuable ones. We shall always look at the consolidated numbers unless specified otherwise.

In the next unit, we will get started with annual reports and different items of financial statements.
