Negative Opinion

The auditor clearly says that something going on in the company is wrong. This implies that the disclosed financial statements does not provide a clear picture of the company's practices.

The auditor is not convinced that the numbers presented are a true picture of the health of the company.

No Opinion Given

This can be the case when the auditor discontinues the audit or decides to not give an opinion. In this case, they are not happy with the financial statements or status of the particular company. Auditor's also refrain from giving an opinion when they do not receive proper justification or explanation from the company's management for their queries.
