

Float is one of the most attractive sources of capital. In fact, companies that are able to generate high float do not require a lot of debt or equity. As a result they are able to generate very attractive returns for their shareholders.

So you must focus on the breakup, whether the business has liabilities, equities, or float.

Float is a new concept, and it might be a bit confusing at first, and you might need some time to understand. But once you start understanding it, you will see that it is one of the most lucrative ways to finance a company's growth.

It was first used by Mr. Buffet while discussing insurance premium floats, and later the term has been used for general businesses as well.
