We have to check all the details within the notes to find any float like items and enter them into the template. "Liabilities for Expenses" have been consistently present across the years and can be entered as "Accrued Expenses". It can also be entered as Liabilities that need to be paid off under "Other Float like other current liabilities". For now, we will enter it as "Accrued Expenses".

Let's have a look at float-like items. Trade deposit received, or security deposit, is similar to Float. This is because on the security deposit received, the company does not pay any interest, it is someone else's money and the company gets to keep the interest earned on the same. Also, if the security deposit needs to be repaid, someone else will pay the company the exact same security deposit. That is why we can count it as a float-like item. For other liabilities, we will have to evaluate one by one if they meet the criteria of a float depending on the nature of the business. So, for now, we only add Trade and security deposit received which stands at Rs. 134 Cr for 2021 and Rs. 123 Cr for 2020.

20	Accounts Payable					621	1007
21	Advance from Customers					41	28
22	Accrued Expenses					393	527
23	Other float like other current liabilities					124	134
24	Non- interest bearing debt like other current liabilities					231	460
25	Bad Debts Written Off

We can categorize each item in one of the above categories depending on the nature of the business and the line item. Such categorization helps us take better decisions and understand liability side better.
