

3. FOUNDER MISFIT

The founder may not be suitable to run the business. For example, you have worked all your life in tech, and suddenly, you have an idea about an ice cream company.

You have started the business without training or knowledge and are now struggling. This is a typical case of a founder misfit.

The founder is not ready for a consumer-facing product, something like an ice cream brand. You were working in the back end rather than facing the customers. The skill required for the two businesses are very different and the founder needs to spend more time in