

MAKE A FAIR OFFER

You have no control the investor's preferences. You have no control over the investor's preferences. You cannot do anything about it. All you can do is move on and meet the next set of investors.

- Remember, at a reasonable price, many businesses become investable. It also depends a on investor's philosophy.
- On the other hand, at a poor price, even good businesses become uninvestable. So the terms of the offer are often "make or break".
- You need to make a reasonable offer. One where they can also be confident about generating a return.
- It depends a lot on your level of traction.
- Raising the first round of funds is tricky, and you do not want your valuation to be a barrier making it impossible for any investor to come on board.

SO TRY TO MAKE THEM A FAIR OFFER.

We will learn more about this going further.

We hope that are thinking a

the investors
. Let's discuss

more in the next section.