

Don't Count It Closed Till Money Hits The Bank

Even if an investor has agreed and the deal is closed, and documentation is done, don't consider the fundraising to be closed till you receive money in your bank account. This is because the investors might back out at any moment due to any change in the scenario or loss of confidence. Thus, don't count the fund-raise closed till time money hits the bank.

From the moment, there is nothing from investing and growing your team instantly and wait for the capital to reach your bank.
