

5. ASK FOR REFERENCES

You can simply ask friends and acquaintances that you are looking to raise capital and whether they can help you connect to any potential investors. You are introduced by someone trust-worthy, the investor's comfort increases significantly.

This introduction will be warm, and the investor will give you their time. If they are not convinced they won't invest. But they have one less variable to worry about founder.

6. LIST ON BLOGS

You will come across thousands of blogs related to start-ups. In India, the largest one is "Your Story." So these blogs keep on accumulating a list of recent deals in different spaces. These can help you identify investors that are relevant to you.

F

ks