

1. ASK FAMILY, FRIENDS, EX-BOSSSES, EX-COLLEAGUES, ETC., TO MAKE INTRODUCTIONS

If you can get people like your colleagues, previous bosses, or friends from school and college to endorse you to different investors, that should be a great starting point. It is unlikely that they will know a lot of investors but these will be your warmest leads.

Hey brother, You know that I'm looking for a fund raise for my startup. And your boss is one of the investor who would be interested in investing into company like ours. Can you introduce me and my startup to him?

2. SO GET RECOMMENDED BY SOMEONE THE INVESTOR TRUSTS

Many people will be hesitant at the beginning to offer recommendations. You can also be hesitant to ask for recommendations. You will start asking for recommendations by asking these people whether they can connect you to potential investment leads that they might have.

Not everyone will offer recommendations. For example, if you ask 25 people for introductions, 2 of them will. Even if these people offer introductions, you will meet new investors.

However, do not lose focus on your business and cold outreach while working on recommendations. All these should go in a parallel manner.

F

ks