

Every investor will have their own opinion. Those opinions and different feedbacks help one look at their business from a critical point of view. The process was a huge learning curve for our entire team.

We can say that we were not ready when we first started talking to investors. We could have saved a lot of time if we had known certain things in October 2020 that we understand better now.

It is only in hindsight that you realize what could have been done better.

It was a long, emotional and learning process to raise our first cheque. However, while working on raising investment for the business, one cannot lose focus on the business side.
