

You can consider the Pitch Deck as your company's CV. When applying for a job, you will send the CV for multiple jobs applications. The recruiter will analyze the CVs, and if they like it, they will call you for an interview.

It is the same with the pitch deck. It is a detailed presentation of your business that you can share with potential investors, and if they like it, they will invite you to a meeting. The goal of a pitch deck is not to get them to invest but to get them interested in your idea. The main idea is to earn time for a detailed discussion about your business. If the pitch deck is not good or does not get the investor interested the conversation will end then end there itself.

The goal of pitch deck is to get potential investors interested in your idea.

Like when applying for a job, your CV should be powerful enough to help you land an interview with a recruiter. However, your discussion in the interview would determine if you get the job. Similarly, in this case, when you go out to meet the investors, everything depends on how the meeting goes. Ultimately the decision will be taken based on the meeting, the business stage and traction till that point.

Remember that the pitch deck is not intended to raise funds immediately. The objective of pitch deck is to get investors interested in what you are doing.
