

HOW DOES AN INVESTOR READ A PITCH DECK?

Every day a professional investor receives about 20-25 pitch decks from different companies. So if they spend even 10 minutes on the pitch decks, they will spend about 200 to 250 minutes going through all pitch decks, which is approximately 3 to 4 hours. Now you cannot expect any investor to spend 3 to 4 hours only on pitch decks.

So what do they do?

They quickly scan through the pitch decks on their mobile. If an idea sounds interesting, they will spend additional 2 to 3 minutes reading the pitch deck. In that 2 to 3 minutes, they will make a judgement on whether they want to discuss further or not. If they are interested, they will invite you for a meeting. If not, they will simply move on.
