

SUMMING UP...

So far, what we have desicussed is:

- First, investors skim through your pitch deck (they do not read every line)
- Remember to have a pitch deck that is easy to read. If your pitch deck takes a lot of time to read and identify things, no one will put in that much time. Simply put, the message will be lost in communication and you may get less investors interested.
- Work with a proof mentality where everything in the pitch deck should be written in a way that you can prove to the investors. If the numbers are good and you can prove those, then there is a higher probability that they might invest in your idea.

So now, you have understood the basics of the pitch deck and its end goal, which is to get the investor's time. We have also understood how exactly an investor goes through it.

In the next section, we will discuss about preparing the pitch deck in greater details. We will task at lot of examples and things to keep in mind.
