

12. ASK HOW YOU WILL USE IT

At the end, the investor expects to understand your ask. How much are you trying to raise, and how do you plan to use it? Do you want to build the product, or do you want to spend it on marketing? Do you want to spend it on customer acquisition, or want to build your distribution network, or if you want to hire your core team? Simply put, you must explain exactly what you will use the capital for.

These are some important things you can include in any pitch deck. Not everything is important in each pitch deck. Simply speaking, there are no specific rules. It is an empty canvas, and you can develop your own pitch deck in a way that you think will be convincing for the investor. You must explain your business well.

Nowadays, many founders also include videos in of the pitch deck. Here they introduce themselves and talk for a minute or so to explain their business

Also, remember that your pitch deck is a public document. It will circulate in the market. So share things that you are comfortable sharing. Do not share all the details in the pitch deck. are so little as well that the le to understand what ex-
