

On the next page, you will find a simple line “Classes are being skipped and work is ignored. Students are spending hours in front of the computer in utter fascination. The thefacebook.com craze has swept through the campus. This is a very simple line taken from The Stanford Daily. By quoting a third party article, they are demonstrating that whatever they are doing is working well.

The next page has a question, “What is thefacebook.com” and a three-line explanation about good idea to as investors generally read as much.
