

WHAT INVESTORS LOOK AT?

Investing decisions are taken depending on the market, the business idea and the founders.

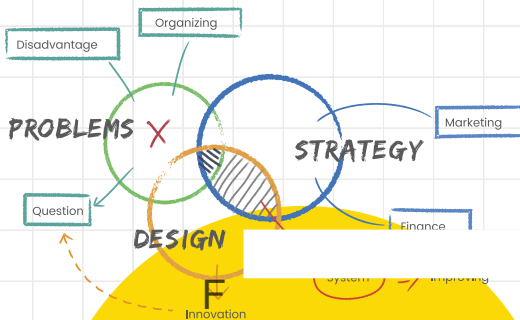

The investors have to be convinced around these three important points:

You, the founder:

The investors expect your business to take off, which is why they are investing. You have to make them believe that you have the capability to manage the entire business not just now but in the near future when the business is much larger and is doing well in the market.

The market of your product:
Market for the product refers to the size of the market, customer behavior, competitors, nature of competition, regulations in the market etc.

The business:

des the business value proposition, differentiation etc.
