You must carefully select the words you use in the pitch deck. Take time to research about the content. Designing and layout are definitely important to make it look visually pleasing. However, the investors are ultimately interested in the content and how you present your business?

Spend some time selecting the words that best describe your business.

What do you want to call your business? Do you want to call it a platform or a community? Do you want to compare it to some other companies or industries? Use words very carefully to explain your business to the investor. In fact, you must use words that investors already understand. This helps you explain your business better.

Your pitch deck is the representation of your business. You must use your brand color to design it and use your brand's language. Avoid creating a pitch based on a different theme than your business.

You want the investors to first go through your pitch deck and then your website, so think of it as a brand extension
