PITCHING : THE BASICS

Suppose the investor has given you their time (45 mins-1hr) and has shown interest. You now need to pitch your business idea to them. This will be the first detailed presentation you make to the investor to explain them your idea. This is called the pitch - a formal explanation of your entire business. Your investor will not only evaluate your idea and the market but you as a founder as well.

For most first time entrepreneurs, naturally, the first few pitches are expected to go poorly. They may not know what to expect, might get nervous or multiple other reasons. It is thus essential to consider the first few pitches as a learning curve. Until and unless you have made a few pitches, you will lack the words and the confidence. You may feel selfdoubt and stress, things that will work against you. As a result, do not worry a lot if your first few pitches do not go well. You are not alone.
