

So from here, we learn that getting capital is just one part of the process. When you raise funds, you are simply trying to get the person invested in your business and also to assist you in various ways.

Apart from providing capital, they can also help you with - media introduction

get your first interviews on major news channels or media outlets

Therefore, fundraising is about more than just raising money. A proper investor-founder relationship lasts for five to ten years. It will take a while to complete. Regardless of how much money you raise, if the company performs, the investor's capital will be utilized in 1-2 years. After that, you and the investor use a long-lasting relationship where your interests are aligned.

F

KS