

SHOW YOUR PRODUCT IN THE PITCH

Showing the product and allowing them to use the product if its possible, it will help them visualize the entire offering, which they can judge for themselves. Then they can take a call on whether or not they want to back it or not, without product they might not able to understand your exact value proposition and how it is differentiated. Thus, whenever you go for a pitch, just don't explain your product; show them to the investors.

NEVER EVER LIE

It is important not to lie, as you cannot get away with it. In the due diligence phase, the investors check everything and verify the truth. The time spent there is in months for a larger deal, while for smaller deals (around 1Cr), the time may be less. However, sooner or later, the lie will get uncovered. This will permanently tarnish your reputation.
