DON'T GO INTO EVERY DETAIL IN THE PITCH ITSELF

It is normal to be too attached to your business and passionately communicate every single detail about it. But it is important not to go into every detail in the pitch itself. You only have 15 minutes and if you start explaining everything you will miss the bigger picture. Also, the investors will ask a lot of questions. So important things will come up in the questions. If the investors are still interested, they will get into details in subsequent meetings.

Otherwise, time will pass and their questions will remain unanswered in your business. Thus, only a small amount of detail. Do not give too long answer as you will not be able to cater questions. You will have subsequent meetings to get into details about your business.
