

With this method, you can see how much weightage do early stage investors place on each factors. You are being evaluated on each of these factors irrespective of the valuation method. Investors would need confident on each of these factors.

So, these are method you can use to value your start-up. Different methods can be used in different scenarios and situations.

The first and most common method is finding identical deals in the same space and then valuing based on the same.

identifying the key industry metric,

and using a multiple of the metric

$$\text{Valuation} = 10,000 \times 10$ = 100,000$$$

most common method to

F

ks