

It has been a wonderful experience. Taking out time while building a business can be taxing. We are grateful that you've taken out time to learn about who these investors are, what they expect, how to approach and pitch to them, and what to do if it's a yes (or a no). It is indeed a tedious process - but one that can change industries. You have the potential to change how people interact with different products.

The fact that you've come so far is very rewarding. We wish you the best while building your business and amazing success with it.

