

(External fund raise)

On the other hand, companies that have raised external capital, have also used it to scale up the business very quickly.

Simply speaking, neither path A nor path B is wrong or right. You have to determine what works best for your business given your circumstances and then decide.

If you are reading this book further, we assume that you have made up your mind that you need a fundraise.

If you do not require extra funds, reading this book further will be of limited value.

You can also talk to a few people who have built their businesses to help you same. Once you have your answer, you can move ahead.

In the next section, we will discuss this question “Are you ready as a business to raise capital?”

F

ks