

4. LARGE PURCHASE ORDER

When you have large purchase order that will grow your business significantly and also, are able to demonstrate that you can have multiple such orders or repeat orders from same buyers this can act as a great basis to attract investment. Such large purchase orders are a very meaningful form of traction.

5. WAITLIST

Dropbox was one of the first drives where you could share data between devices. They created an extensive waitlist of sign-ups in a few days.

So the investors understood that whatever Dropbox is doing or proposing has a huge market potential. Simply put, they could demonstrate that whatever they are doing, they had a ready market for the same.

Product based companies can benefit a lot lists even before the prod-

ks

