

7. ADVANCE FROM CUSTOMERS

You can run ad campaigns for your product before it is manufactured where you can ask them to book the product by paying a small percentage of the item's cost and paying the rest on delivery.

If large number of customers are booking the item by paying an advance, it can be considered as traction. However, this strategy has an inherent risk that the product must be complete and delivered in time.

