

The best-case scenario of traction is if you have proof in numbers than simply having stories.

You want to focus more on numbers as that will get the investors to move. If you have good traction, you should be able to attract investor attention.

If you do not have solid numbers, you might have difficulty finding the correct investors willing to invest in your business.

We have discussed some metrics to demonstrate traction. You can also identify metrics within the industry you are operating in. Identifying the correct metrics and having a strong number makes a very
