

2.7 THE JOURNEY OF A STARTUP

By now, we have understood whether you are ready to raise your first capital, and whether your business requires that capital. Next, we must understand the typical journey of a startup. What are different stages that company goes through? Also different companies have different stories. Founder have run a scaled companies for several years (say 10-20 years) before raising their first round of capital. There is no hard and fast rule. You can raise your first round of capital on the first day of your business or after 5,10, or 20 years or more. It is all about how you make your business decisions and the purpose of your business. It is all about how you make your business decisions and the purpose of your business.

er, typical startup journey for successful startup looks like this:

