

WHAT GIVES THEM CONFIDENCE?

So what gives the investors confidence that this business idea can grow their investment? Investors usually have long checklist to evaluate the business. However, in the end, everything boils down to three crucial points that early-stage startup investors need.

01

LARGE MARKET

If your business does not have a really large market, there is a lesser probability that any meaningful capital will flow. At one point, your company is bound to saturate. Let's consider that you are working on a niche product. However, the market requirement for that product is not very large; approximately 100 crore in the country. This is an example of a small market. So, even if you do everything correctly, that business cannot scale beyond a certain point because the overall market cannot grow beyond a certain point.

the market is too small and large companies cannot be built in all markets.
