

Growth

As production volume increases, cost per unit also falls, and thus profitability starts to rise.

As the product price goes down, customer demand increases.

Here, Complementary products are also available in the market, so people have greater benefits from purchasing the product and its components.

The major characteristics of this stage are:

- Rapid increase in sales
- Product improvements
- Increase in competition
- Increase in profits
- Reduction in price
- Strengthening the distribution channel