

Social Media Ads - New Market Disruption for Advertisers

- Traditional advertising was expensive and could only be done by bigger companies with huge budgets.
- Social media allowed targeted ads for as little as ₹200.
- It allows a completely new set of users to access the advertising market.

As social media allows an entirely new set of advertisers, it creates a new market for the media industry, disrupting what existed earlier with direct competition. As it creates new users, it is a new-market disruption.

So, these are the different kinds of disruptions that may take place. Before entering any industry, we must evaluate the disruptive forces acting on it. Let's now move on to understanding regulations.
