

Threat of Substitution

A substitute product uses a alternate solution to try and solve the same economic need.<sup>[27]</sup>

This refers to the attempt to create similar gains or relieve the same pains, even though different technology is used.

The moment the value proposition of other product becomes stronger than the product they are currently using, they may start switching over.