

The customer profile of each segment should be created and then the product or service that is being proposed should be evaluated and altered to meet the needs and expectations of the customer segments selected out of all the potential customer segments initially identified.

Products and Services

It shows which pains and gains are not addressed by the product /service.

Potential Customer

Once the product creates the same gains and relieves the same pains as desired by the customers, the product-customer fit would be achieved, and the product idea would find a market for it. If the product-customer fit is not achieved, the product will not find a market for itself. The customer will only be willing to pay for the product once the fit has been established.