

Gains

It refers to what the customers wish to accomplish/benefit from consumption of a product or service. Gains and pain relievers are the fundamental units that together create value for the customers. The more the gains created, the higher the value created by the product. We will understand more about gain creators and pain relievers going ahead.

For example, when a person buys a smartphone, it creates multiple gains for them.

However, the priority of usage may vary depending on the customer segment. Also, gains can be different kinds - functional, social or psychological.

Spending time with family

Gathering new experiences

Trying out new cuisines

Exploring new places

Relaxing from work

Meeting new people

When a person signs up for a family vacation, it creates multiple gains for them. We need to understand which gains are the customers looking for the most.
