

For existing businesses, products/services are pretty easy to identify. Each has to be understood based on how it solves the customer pains and gains.

Entrepreneurs must understand their product in and out and then try to figure out if any changes could be made to the product to serve newer segments of customers (other than existing customers).

